Hi,

Does anyone know if we encounter latest developments on TTIP during this course? There are lots of controversies around that here in Germany

Regards, andre

I have support for the German position regarding those agreements. In my opinion TTIP is very similar to CETA, which apparently was done without much public information. According to Wikipedia: Romania and Bulgaria had declared they would not ratify it until the Visa requirements are lifted. Personally I think this is a very strange position, because some researches already found that those agreements will not be much positive for the Bulgarian economy and personally I really do not understand how lifting VISA requirements would improve the economical situation, compensate the potential damages etc.

In my opinion, there is probably nothing that North America could offer. Just look at the prices in Asia - much, much better. Those deals seems like another whim of EU and North American politicians to delude the public that they do something.

Speaking of European Business Law.
Is the TTIP the future of commerce?

STRUCTURE OF THE AGREEMENT

1. Improvement of market access.
2. Legislative cooperation to avoid duplication and be consistent.
3. New rules to help businesses, especially SMEs. (energy, raw materials, IPR, investment procedures).

The legislative cooperation is now the most important point.

Cecilia Malmström, ask for support and unanimity before Spanish Parliament .

" In any case, the goal is to conclude before the end of the mandate of Barack Obama in 2017, to avoid furthe delays" (C. Malmström)

What do you think about?
