Introduction

For a statement of accomplishment with distinction the MOOC requires the student to write a legal report to an imaginary board. The learning objective is to put the theoretic knowledge in to practice for the elaboration of a legal report such as an assignment that the student is likely to be confronted with in their employment. It shall be a condensed report interpreting an important issue which can be deducted from one of the cases annexed. It can be a single issue which has an impact for the recipient organization and its imaginary board. The legal report consists of two parts with two different deadlines which are both followed by a peer review period.

You can choose to do the assignment either during the first five weeks or during the last five weeks of the course. If you for instance are very interested in labour law, or another topic covered in period 2 and 3, you can start to do your assignment in week 6 of the course. Of course it is also possible to prepare your assignments now, but hand them in during the last five weeks.

The structure of the assignment	Time span	Percent of final grade	Assignment description
Phase one The presentation	One week	20 %	Firstly, the board requests the student to make a presentation of a maximum of 500 words about the issue that will be discussed in the final report.
Peer review one	One week	10 %	Five peer reviews required.
Phase two The final report	Two weeks	50 %	Secondly, the board requires the student to write the final paper of a maximum of 2500 words. The student shall answer the research questions posed in phase one.
Peer review two	One week	20 %	Two peer reviews and one self review required.

Peer Review

Each part of the assignment will be followed by a peer review period. It is important that the peer reviews focus is to give constructive feedback to your peers. The peer reviews are the base for the grading but it is also the key to improve and evolve both personally and for your peer.

Choosing Case Law

We have compiled a list of case law from the European Court of Justice. The cases are discussed in various lectures in the course, and each module has one relevant case. In the list you can see which case belongs to which module and lecture. You may choose any one of the listed cases for your report, but we ask that you only choose from the cases we have compiled.

Note: The explanations below cover the general process. Please make sure to go to the individual assignment pages and read the instructions contained therein, as those specific instructions may override the general instructions below.

Time	What happens then
Assignment starts	After this time, you can see the assignment and start working on it. You can save drafts of your work as you go along, and you can come back later to continue working on your draft. When you're ready to submit your work for evaluation, remember to click the "Submit" button. If the deadline passes and you haven't clicked "Submit" yet, then your saved draft will not be evaluated. Note: You can submit and re-submit your work for evaluation as many times as you want before the submission deadline, without any penalty. Only your last submission will be seen and evaluated by your classmates.

Submission deadline	After this time, you can no longer change your submission. If you have not clicked the "Submit" button by this time, your classmates will not see your submission, you will not receive an evaluation for this assignment, and you will not be permitted to evaluate your classmates' submissions. After this time, you will evaluate the work of a minimum number of your peers. Finally, you will evaluate your own work.
Evaluation starts	Optionally, you can choose to evaluate the work of even more of your classmates before the evaluation deadline passes. This is very helpful for the success of the course. Remember: as with the submission stage, this evaluation stage is required if you want your own assignment submission to be evaluated.
Evaluation deadline	After this time, you can no longer evaluate the work your peers or your own. If you have not finished your assigned evaluation tasks by this time, your own assignment may not be evaluated and you may receive a grade penalty.
